

Price taking

- Price taking implies the firm has no market power
- Nothing it can do affects the prices it gets for its output (or pays for its inputs)
- ...but price-taking does not mean prices do not change

When is price taking plausible?

- Price taking is plausible if the firm has a small market share
- Many small producers produce a homogeneous good
- Everyone can observe prices